SUMMER SAILSTICE

Global Celebration of Sailing

June 22, 2019

It's Spring Time!

...which means it's almost Sailing Time.

The Spring Equinox is here, and as the northern hemisphere is thawing its way into summer we're getting excited for a great season on the water.

Equinox means "equal night"; the time at which (with the exception of a few minutes of difference depending on where you are) you should experience equal hours of daylight and night time darkness. Plus, in case you didn't know, today's equinox will be accompanied by the third and last 'super moon' for 2019 so if you can, step outside and enjoy the view.

But what does this all mean for sailors?

It doesn't matter how you sail, it just matters that you do!

Within a few days the daylight hours will begin to exceed the night-time darkness, which means extended sailing time!

It also means that Summer Sailstice is now 3 months away and if you haven't yet, you need to get on board and start planning your June 22nd sailing celebrations.

Scores of sailors are signing up and sharing their sailing plans. Join them!

After a warm winter in the Bahamas KLH is taking advantage of spring weather and heading north.

Jennifer and friends are sailing to South Bass Island in Lake Erie for the annual Pirate Fest.

William is taking it easy on Peconic Bay with lunch, swimming and a Sunset Cruise.

Rose City Yacht Club is hosting the Jack Gainer Memorial Medium Distance Race on the Columbia River.

The Brady Mountain crew in Arkansas are celebrating sailing with family, friends, food and a raft up.

Stuart is looking forward to cocktails, spaghetti supper and a solstice sunset sail.
